■ Diane Cheatham of Urban Edge Developers Ltd. is practicing what she preaches. She's installed two construction trailers that underscore her environmental credentials at her Urban Reserve sustainable neighborhood in North Dallas. Instead of the usual single or double wides, the trailers are recycled 1966 and 1969 Airstream travel trailers remodeled primarily using renewable or recycled materials. Cheatham said she loves the classic form of the Airstreams and knew the interiors could be fitted out as "mobile satellite offices that could be used for years to come."

■ Avery Johnson, Dallas Mavericks coach and 2005-2006 NBA Coach of the Year, wasn't just doling out basketball tips on Nov. 14. Johnson was participating in the AT&T-sponsored "Leadership on the Court. Delivered" seminar where he gave local C-level execs the benefit of leadership and motivation insights he has gleaned throughout his sports career. The seminar, which also featured Phil Johnson, AT&T regional vice president for the company's enterprise segment, and AT&T State President James Epperson, was held at the American Airlines Center. After all the serious business was over, attendees were able to watch the Mavs beat the Chicago Bulls 111 to 99.

■ Former Oklahoma Sooner Caesar Rentie has scored a new role. Rentie, who several years ago hung up his cleats to become a clergyman, has been appointed full-time chaplain at Methodist Mansfield Medical Center. Rentie joined Methodist Dallas Medical Center in 1992 as an intern in pastoral care and went on to become staff chaplain. ... Congrats to David Wilgus, a principal at Carrollton's Launch Agency, who recently was named "best creative director" by the Dallas Ad League. "It's a great honor," Wilgus said. "I'm also extremely humbled by it. Dallas has an incredible talent pool and I'm flattered to be recognized by my peers here."
